

Mobile carriers are not an acceptable substitute for broadband internet. Mobile plans are more expensive than broadband, with limited data caps. It is wrong to further marginalize rural areas that need more infrastructure investment and internet provider competition, not less. Both individuals and business find the internet a necessity. Don't penalize people for where they live by pretending mobile internet access is adequate for everyone.